

Contributors

Hanjo Berressem is Professor of American literature at the University of Bielefeld, Germany. He is the author of Pynchon's Poetics: Interfacing Theory and Text. His "Lines of Desire: Reading Gombrowicz's Novels with Lacan" will be published in the spring of 1997 by Northwestern UP.

M. Keith Booker is Associate Professor of English at the University of Arkansas. He is the author of numerous essays and books on modern literature and literary theory, including Joyce, Bakhtin, and the Literary Tradition and A Practical Introduction to Literary Theory and Criticism.

Terry Caesar is Professor of English at Clarion University and author of, most recently, Forgiving the Boundaries: Home as Abroad in American Travel Writing (U of Georgia P, 1995).

Eric Cassidy received his M.A. in philosophy and literature from the University of Warwick in 1992, and is currently a Ph.D. candidate in philosophy and literature at Warwick. His dissertation explores Pynchon and Deleuze, postmodernism and cybernetic culture. Co-organizer of "Thomas Pynchon: Schizophrenia and Social Control," he also helped organize "Virtual Futures '94" and "Virtual Futures '95."

Bernard Duyffhuizen is a co-editor of Pynchon Notes and Chair of the English Department at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. His current Pynchon projects include completing the forthcoming Index issue of PN and a book-length study of the reader and Gravity's Rainbow.

John Johnston is Associate Professor of English at Emory University and the author of Carnival of Repetition, as well as numerous essays on postmodern fiction and theory. A new book, Information Multiplicity: American Fiction in the Age of Media Assemblages, is forthcoming from Johns Hopkins UP.

John Mascaro lives in Los Angeles and teaches in UCLA's Writing Programs. He wrote his dissertation, "Beyond the Zero: The Conditions of Uncertainty in Gravity's Rainbow," at SUNY-Stony Brook. His reviews and articles of cultural criticism appeared, most recently, in The Los Angeles Reader—until that publication's more recent demise. He has published a book of poetry, No Real Warning.

Dan O'Hara took his B.A. and M.A. in English literature from Warwick University. Currently, he is reading for the D.Phil. at Christ Church, Oxford University, which project entails a history of machines in literature and philosophy from de Bergerac to Ballard. Co-organizer of "Thomas Pynchon: Schizophrenia and Social Control" and of "Virtual Futures '95," he is co-editor of the volume Cyberrevolution, forthcoming from Routledge.

David Porush is Professor of literature at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He is the author of The Soft Machine: Cybernetic Fiction, and of the new website Telepathy: <http://www.rpi.edu/~porusd>.

Martin E. Rosenberg, an assistant professor of English, teaches critical theory and twentieth-century literature and science at Eastern Kentucky University. Director of the RHIZOME Project, a hypertext simulation environment for critical thinking, he has published numerous articles exploring the relation among complexity theories in physics, cognitive science and contemporary theory, modern and postmodern literature and art, hypertext, and the rhetoric of computer interfaces. He is now completing Fables of Self-Organization: The Cultural Work of Complexity in the Avant-Garde.

Brian Stonehill is Professor of English and Coordinator of Media Studies at Pomona College. He is the author of The Self-Conscious Novel: Artifice in Fiction from Joyce to Pynchon (U of Pennsylvania P, 1988).

Steven Weisenburger is the author of A Gravity's Rainbow Companion (1988, forthcoming in a second, revised edition in 1998) and Fables of Subversion (1994).

The editors would also like to thank the following for their contributions to this issue of Pynchon Notes: Jeff Abbott, Glenn Scott Allen, Magnus Bergh, Bob Bowie, Mark de Saint-Rat, Paul Di Filippo, Thanasi Douvris, T. R. Factor, Hartwin Gebhardt, Jay Helfrick, David Jordan, Zofia Kolbuszewska, Gretchen Krafft, Sergey Kuznetsov, Cliff Mead, Steve Moore, Bob Orlovsky, Penny Padgett, Jan Parker, Prokopis Prokopidis, Rob Purdy, Heikki Raudaskoski, Sam Sifton, Martha Skrivanek, David Spatz, Jeff St. Clair, Bonnie Surfus, Lewis Tiffany, Steve Tomaske, and Mike Zunis.